Who is Benjamin Harrison: The 23rd President of America

The figure depicted by the statue is Benjamin Harrison, who was born in 1833 in the town of North Bend, Ohio. The grandson of William Henry Harrison, the 9th President of America, Benjamin Harrison settled in Indianapolis after completing his legal education and built a successful career as a lawyer. Serving as a brigade commander in the ranks of the Union army during the Civil War, Harrison became a senator for the state of Indiana after the war and began his term as the 23rd President of the United States in 1889.

Harrison's presidential term was shaped by significant developments such as America's westward expansion, the admission of six new states to the union, and the modernization of the Navy. The signing of the Sherman Antitrust Act has gone down in history as one of his most lasting legacies in economic policy. Harrison, whose term ended in 1893, returned to Indianapolis and passed away in this city in 1901.
