Full Length Statue

The most impressive way to immortalize a person with their entire posture, character, and the impression they left behind is to have a full-length statue made. While bust sculptures only reflect the face and shoulder area, full-length statues convey a person's entire body language, posture, clothing, and personal characteristics in full. For this reason, a full-length statue creates a much deeper impact both artistically and emotionally.

Production with Realistic Craftsmanship

This full-length male statue produced in our workshop has been brought to life with an exceptionally realistic level of craftsmanship, as clearly seen in the image. Every fold of the coat, the position of the cane in his hand, the expression on his facial features, and the details of his shoes have all been crafted individually. The golden bronze patina coating gives the statue a timeless and prestigious appearance. Standing on its base, this work adds weight and meaning to any space it occupies.

Who Has It Made?

Full-length statue orders are generally placed for the following purposes: by municipalities and public institutions in memory of those who have contributed to the city, by schools and universities in honor of founders or significant figures, by families to keep the memory of a lost loved one alive, and by companies to immortalize their founders or honorary chairmen. Each order begins with a personalized design process and is completed with an entirely original work of art.

Material and Size Options

Full-length statues can be produced in different materials. Bronze casting is the most durable and prestigious option, fully suitable for outdoor use. Statues produced with polyester resin can be used both indoors and outdoors and offer a more economical alternative. Different aesthetic results can also be achieved with stone-finish coating options. In terms of size, production at real human height (170-185 cm) is the most preferred option, although smaller or larger sizes can also be produced upon request.

How Does the Order Process Work?

To place a full-length statue order, clear photographs of the person must first be shared. Photographs taken from different angles that clearly reflect facial features and body proportions directly affect production quality. Once the photographs are submitted, the digital design process begins, and production starts after approval. The entire process is carried out in constant communication with the customer, with visuals shared at intermediate stages for your approval.

Price and Quote

Full-length statue prices vary depending on the material to be used, the height of the statue, the duration of craftsmanship, and the level of detail. For this reason, no fixed price is listed on our page. You can receive a free price quote by filling out our order form or by contacting us via our WhatsApp line. Our team will get back to you as soon as possible.
