Banana Statue

The banana statue is a unique sculptural work that transforms one of nature's most recognizable fruits into a large-scale and impressive piece of art. The work seen in the photograph was captured during the clay modeling stage, clearly demonstrating the meticulous nature of the production process through its majestic 2-meter height and smooth surface quality. Designed as a custom order for a banana wholesaler, this work has come to life through the unique handiwork of the Heykel.org workshop. Once the statue is completed, a special lighting system will also be integrated, giving the piece a striking appearance both day and night.

The Place of Fruit Statues in the World of Art and Advertising

Fruit statues have gained a significant place in the art world with the rise of the pop art movement. This trajectory, stretching from Andy Warhol’s banana album cover to Jeff Koons’ giant balloon animals and fruit sculptures, strongly demonstrates that everyday objects can be transformed into artistic expressions. Today, large-scale fruit statues are frequently encountered not only in art galleries but also in shopping malls, theme parks, food production facilities, and corporate spaces. These works, which strengthen brand identity, function as photo points, and add a unique character to a space, carry both artistic and marketing value.

The banana is one of the most preferred fruit forms in this field. With its long and curved silhouette, simple yet powerful form, and universal recognition, a banana statue immediately draws attention in any setting and leaves a memorable visual impact. For companies operating in the food sector, a banana statue is not just a decorative element but also a powerful brand symbol.

Design and Form Features of the Statue

The banana statue in the photo reflects the form of a real banana on a large scale and in an extremely realistic manner. Creating a strong focal point in the space with its 2-meter height, the statue masterfully conveys the characteristic curve of the banana, the stem detail at the tip, and the smooth surface texture. The surface smoothness and balance of form, clearly visible even from the black and white photograph of the statue, showcase the labor and care expended during the clay modeling stage. When completed, this statue, which will gain a highly striking appearance with its bright yellow surface, will literally shine at night thanks to the lighting system.

Material and Structural Features

The banana statue is manufactured from reinforced fiberglass material. The internal structure of the statue features a steel iron skeleton, which provides the piece with both high durability and a long lifespan. While the fiberglass exterior stands out for its lightness and suitability for surface treatment, the internal steel structure provides the structural integrity that is critically important for large-scale statues. This structure, which is fully suitable for outdoor use, is protected by a special surface coating resistant to sun, rain, humidity, and temperature changes. UV-resistant polyurethane paints are used in the color application to ensure the surface maintains its vibrancy for many years.

Lighting Integration

One of the most unique features of this banana statue is the internal lighting system to be added during the completion phase. The semi-transparent nature of the fiberglass material creates an ideal base for internal illumination. Lit from within during the night, the statue creates a magnificent visual effect in its location. LED-based lighting systems are preferred for both their energy efficiency and longevity. With color-changing RGB LED systems, the statue can be bathed in different color tones, allowing the visual experience to be personalized according to the atmosphere of the venue and the nature of the event.

Statues of All Fruits Can Be Made

The banana statue is just one example. At our workshop, large-scale statue production can be carried out for all fruit forms. Apple, orange, strawberry, watermelon, pineapple, cherry, grape, melon, peach, apricot, and many more fruits can be produced as statues in different sizes and materials. Unique fruit statues are designed and produced for orchards, organic food stores, juice producers, agricultural fairs, and child-themed venues. Fruit statues integrated with brand colors and logos can also be ordered for corporate brands.

Size and Usage Areas

The banana statue, which is 2 meters high in standard production, can be produced in much larger sizes upon customer request. We have the production capacity for monumental scales of 5 meters and above. Banana and fruit statues are used as fair stands and facility entrances for fruit wholesalers and producers, as eye-catching showcase elements for markets and supermarkets, as fun and interactive area elements for playgrounds and theme parks, and as original interior decorations and social media photo points for restaurants and cafes. Lighted versions are particularly preferred for venues oriented toward the night economy and opening events. You can contact us for banana statues and other statue order ideas.
