Sculpturing

Sculpture is one of humanity's oldest and most deeply rooted art forms. Brought to life through materials ranging from stone to bronze, plaster to fiberglass, sculptures add meaning and aesthetics across a wide spectrum — from historical monuments to modern decoration, personal memories to corporate prestige. As one of the masters of this ancient art that has continued for thousands of years, we are proud to be one of Turkey's leading sculpture workshops with over 20 years of experience.

What is Sculpture? The Historical Journey of Sculpture Art

Sculpture is an art form and craft encompassing the creation of three-dimensional works of art. This deep-rooted tradition, stretching from the cave carvings of early humans to today's monumental sculptures, has reflected the cultural and aesthetic values of societies throughout every era. From the marble gods of Ancient Greece to Roman imperial busts, from the stone reliefs of Anatolian civilizations to the contemporary sculpture parks of modern cities, sculpture has managed to exist in every age.

Turkey, with thousands of years of civilizational heritage, is one of the countries with the world's richest sculptural legacy. Keeping this deep-rooted tradition alive and bringing it together with modern techniques is both a responsibility and a passion for us.

Over 20 Years of Experience, Over 500 Works

Our sculpture workshop is a well-established institution that has left its mark across Turkey and abroad with over 20 years of industry experience. With more than 500 completed original sculpture projects, we have served a wide clientele ranging from municipalities to the private sector, from museums to residential projects.

Our expert team of 6 consists of experienced sculptors, mold masters, and technical staff. Maintaining the highest quality standards in every project, we transform our clients' dreams into tangible works of art. Thanks to the versatility of our team, we can produce at any scale and with any technique, from small figurines to monumental sculptures.

Materials and Techniques We Use in Sculpture

Bronze Sculpture: Produced using casting techniques, bronze sculpture ranks among the most prestigious sculpture types thanks to its durability and the patina it develops over time. Preferred for monumental sculptures, bust works, and decorative figures, bronze remains intact for decades.

Fiberglass Sculpture: Standing out with its lightweight structure, color variety, and ease of processing, fiberglass is frequently preferred especially for large-scale decorative sculptures. Suitable for both indoor and outdoor use, fiberglass sculptures offer long-lasting and low-maintenance solutions.

Plaster and Polyester Sculpture: Plaster and polyester materials used in architectural ornaments, interior decorations, and custom design works allow fine details to be conveyed perfectly.

Marble and Stone Sculpture: Indispensable materials of classical sculpture, marble and stone are particularly used in grave monuments, garden sculptures, and architectural reliefs.

Architectural Relief and Bas-Relief Works

Architectural relief and bas-relief works, an important branch of sculpture, are applied in many areas from building facades to interior walls, from monumental structures to private residences. Our workshop carries out relief production across a wide range, from restoration reliefs compatible with historical texture to abstract reliefs unique to modern architectural projects. Every relief work is carefully designed with the spirit of the space and the client's vision.

Custom Sculpture Order: We Turn Your Dream Into Reality

Do you want to have your own sculpture made or immortalize your institution or loved ones? We are by your side at every step of our custom sculpture order process. We create three-dimensional designs from your photographs and begin the production process upon your approval. We bring to life every kind of custom project, from bust works to full-size sculptures, from corporate logo figures to thematic decorative sculptures.
