

Cow Sculpture

The cow has been one of humanity's most loyal companions for thousands of years. This precious animal, a symbol of abundance, purity and nature, can now be brought to your spaces as a cow sculpture. Cow sculptures produced in the Heykel.org workshop stand out as both decorative and eye-catching elements with their realistic details and durable structure. These pieces, which can be used in many different settings from a farm entrance to a city square, from in front of a restaurant to a landscape arrangement, leave a smile and warmth on everyone who passes by.

Realistic Design and Superior Craftsmanship

The cow sculpture produced in the Heykel.org workshop goes through a production process in which every detail is meticulously crafted, starting from the clay modeling stage. As with all animal sculpture works, the animal's muscle structure, skin texture, horns and general body proportions are designed to resemble a real cow. As seen in the photograph, even at the clay stage, surface details and anatomical accuracy reach an impressive level. This meticulous working process ensures that the resulting piece evokes the feeling of encountering a real animal in visitors. The sculpture, produced in full realistic dimensions, adds a unique and vibrant atmosphere to your space.

Material and Durability

The first stage in cow sculpture production is detailed modeling with clay. A mold is then taken from this model and casting is carried out with fiberglass and polyester resin. Fiberglass material is extremely resistant to moisture, frost, sunlight and seasonal changes, offering years of trouble-free use outdoors. In the final stage, the desired color and surface coating is applied and the piece is made ready for delivery. The realistic brown tone painting option is among the most preferred choices, and production can also be carried out in different breed and color combinations.

Areas of Use

Cow sculpture areas of use spread across an extremely wide range. This sculpture, which is a perfect promotional and decoration element for businesses selling dairy and meat products, butchers, dairies and farm stores, creates an eye-catching welcome point in front of or at the entrance of your business. It is also a very suitable choice for landscape projects, parks with agricultural themes, nature areas and open-air museums. Children's entertainment areas, zoos and nature parks are also among the venues that frequently prefer cow sculptures. Offering a unique decoration alternative for restaurants and cafes as well, this piece is particularly well-received in rural and rustic themed venues.

Size and Customization Options

Cow sculptures can be produced from small desktop models up to real size and above monumental scales. While the real size cow sculpture is the most preferred option, it is also possible to place orders in different dimensions according to space requirements. In terms of color options, brown, black and white Holstein pattern, beige and special color combinations can be requested. Cow models of different breeds can also be produced, and horn, udder and tail details can also be customized according to the customer's special request. Each order is evaluated according to the customer's needs and a suitable production plan is created accordingly.

Cow Sculpture Prices

Cow sculpture prices are determined according to size, material, color and detail workmanship. There is a price difference between a real size cow sculpture and a small decorative model. Models produced with fiberglass material continue to be the most preferred option in terms of both durability and cost.
