

Sculpture for Sale

For individuals and organizations who want to own a high-quality, original sculpture, the biggest challenge is finding a reliable producer who can deliver a piece that fully matches their expectations; because sculptures with genuine artistic value are not made ready-made, but rather emerge through a custom order and a dedicated production process. Heykel.org is a sculpture workshop company established precisely to meet this need. Once you submit your request through our website, our experienced team of sculptors designs and produces your project from scratch.

Our Workshop's Experience and Production Philosophy

With over 22 years of experience, Heykel.org is one of Turkey's well-established sculpture workshops. During this time, more than 600 sculpture orders have been designed and delivered to clients. All of the sculptors working in our workshop are graduates of Faculty of Fine Arts, Department of Sculpture programs, and a significant portion of our team holds the title of State Artist. Every order is shaped from the ground up according to the specific request, drawing on this academic background and craftsmanship; there is no concept of stock or ready-made products in our approach.

Why Choose Custom Order Production?

Most ready-made sculptures available on the market are mass-produced from molds and carry limited artistic value. At Heykel.org, on the other hand, every project is designed from scratch according to the client's request, the characteristics of the space, and personal preferences; therefore, no two sculptures are expected to be identical. While this production method requires more time and artistic effort, the resulting piece is entirely original and one-of-a-kind. Requests that reach our workshop are first evaluated by our sculptors, then proceed through sketching stages before final clay production begins.

Our Production Process and Materials Used

Once an order is received, a multi-stage process is carried out in our workshop, including design, mold preparation, casting or shaping, and surface finishing. Fiberglass is the primary material preferred in production; thanks to its lightness, durability, and cost advantages, it offers a practical solution for both residential and public space projects. Upon request, production can also be carried out using bronze casting, polyester resin, concrete, and various other metal materials. Different aesthetic effects such as bronze, stone, gold, or rust finishes can be achieved through surface coating techniques.

What Types of Sculptures Can Be Ordered?

Our workshop accepts orders across a wide range of categories, including figurative sculptures, monuments and corporate sculptures, animal figures, historical and culturally themed works, decorative garden sculptures, and custom portrait pieces. Each project can be designed at different scales, ranging from a small decorative figure to a large public square monument. The space where the requested sculpture will be placed, lighting conditions, and environmental factors are also taken into account during the design process.

Affordable Pricing and Quality Assurance

As a workshop-based producer, Heykel.org eliminates intermediary costs, allowing us to offer affordable solutions to our clients without compromising on quality. Every sculpture produced undergoes detailed quality control before delivery, with careful evaluation of craftsmanship, surface coating, and durability. This reliability, built up over the years, is one of the main reasons our workshop is preferred both domestically and internationally.

Order Process and Delivery

Those who wish to order a sculpture from Heykel.org can start the process by sharing their project ideas, space details, and expectations with our workshop. Our sculptors evaluate the incoming request and recommend the most suitable design and production method. In addition to domestic deliveries, our workshop regularly ships sculptures to various countries, providing clients with support in sculpture packaging and shipping as well as customs procedures. Assembly services are also offered for corporate and large-scale projects.
