War of Independence Relief Sculpture

The War of Independence relief sculpture is a monumental work created to immortalize the Turkish nation's struggle for independence and its spirit of patriotism. These reliefs, coming to life across Eastern Anatolia from the streets of Erzurum to the squares of Kars, from the plains of Pasinler to city walls, convey historic events to future generations through the language of art. These works, which carry meaning for institutions, municipalities, schools and public spaces, add historical depth and national identity to the spaces they inhabit.

Features of the Relief Sculpture

Crafted from high-quality bronze or polyester materials, the War of Independence reliefs and Pasinler Battle relief stand out with their realistic figurework and original compositions. The homeland-themed wall relief in Erzurum meticulously depicts War of Independence scenes and the Turkish flag motif, powerfully reflecting the message of national unity and integrity. The mounted warrior relief depicting the Battle of Pasinler masterfully brings to life cavalry figures, castle silhouettes and the dynamics of war. The monument relief in Kars, integrated with the sculpture group above, presents the crowded soldier composition that embodies the collective spirit of the War of Independence in all its magnificence.

Areas of Use

War of Independence relief sculptures are designed for municipalities, district governorships, schools, cultural centers and public buildings. They serve as a powerful visual element reinforcing national identity on building facades, square walls, monument pedestals and school gardens. Ideal for historically significant city entrances, squares and ceremonial spaces, these reliefs represent one of the most meaningful ways to express the Turkish nation's devotion and gratitude toward the War of Independence through a lasting work of art.
